

DEFINITION OF CLAIM

The definition of a claim for one of the following types of service is a single document representing services provided to one recipient.

Ambulance services	Laboratory and radiological services
Chiropractic services	Medical supplies
Clinic services	Nurse-midwife services
Dental services	Optometric services
EPSDT services	Other practitioner services
Family and pediatric nurse practitioner services	Outpatient hospital services
Family planning services	Physician services
Federally qualified health center services	Podiatric services
Home health agency services	Psychiatric services
Inpatient hospital services	Rural health clinic services
	Skilled nursing services

For prescribed drugs, each line appearing on the document represents a claim. One document may contain a maximum of two lines and both must represent the same recipient.

For nursing facility services and intermediate care facility for the mentally retarded services, each line appearing on the document represents a claim. One document may contain a maximum of 17 lines.